

WARSAW MEDICAL ACADEMY

It is one of the largest universities in Poland and was established in January 1950. The experienced faculty of the college is known all over the world for their teaching skills. In addition to this, the medical program of the university attracts international students from far and wide. The quality of teaching is enhanced by the fact that the student-teacher ratio is about 2:15. This allows the educators at the university to take good care of the candidates. This automatically raises the level of education that is present at the college. Another feature of the educational institution is its recognition from prestigious organizations like MCI, WHO etc.

Along with theoretical knowledge, the professors at the university are also known to give practical knowledge to the students. The college has five hospitals under its domain. Thus the candidates can make use of these facilities as well. Additionally, the massive library contains several books. The scholars can use these as and when needed by them. Along with medical knowledge, the professors also increase the personal skills of every student. This, in turn, helps them become better individuals for life. Thus each person studying in the university grows up to become a good doctor.
